Balch, Francis N., 130 Prince Street, Jamaica Plain.

At the age of fifteen, I got up to the Magdalen Islands (then very much out of the world) on a blue-nose cod fisherman and from there through Belle Isle far enough north to see a walrus. England and Europe, 1892, walking and climbs in the Alps, walked through Norway, climbed in the Jotunheim district, climbed in Switzerland and walking trip through the Thuringen Wald in 1898 and 1902; Rockies north of Banff, collecting for the Museum of Comparative Zoölogy, 1896, including north of the Bow Lakes; zoölogical collecting in the Antilles and at Bermuda and climbing in Colorado. In November and December, 1915, to England on S.S. "Rotterdam" heavily overloaded with copper, caught in vicious storm called "the Irish Hurricane." Made only 10 miles one day, seas sweeping decks clean of all movables while volunteer seamen with heavy lines about waists strengthened hatch covers. Made Falmouth just after harbor was closed for night and had to lay by till day, circled ceaselessly by British aircraft and destroyers. That night the Law Courts, whither I was bound, were bombed by Zeppelins. I arrived in London at 10 a.m. determined not to get into any war work, but at 1 p.m. I was working at a huge pile of soiled thick winter underclothes to determine by smelling which could be re-issued "az iz" and which not. Ambassador Page found he had an urgent but strictly undercover job for me. It was Christmas before I could get away. In late December I had my first airplane ride (long promised) in experimental type "pusher" plane made of bamboo lashed with rawhide. When I stepped out of the plane, numb with cold, the pilot asked if I would like his picture as a keepsake.
